FRANK E. LANGLEY, Publisher

Let us hope with New York that it never will have another criminal case like that just brought to a close.

Becker's "iron nerve" did not desert him even after he had taken his seat in the death chair, which quality of mind serves to impress upon one what a splendid official of law and order he might have been.

The solving of the mystery as to the cause of the deaths of Berkshire cattle brings a measure of satisfaction in that no cattle disease is spreading through Vermont, but it furnishes a disquieting feeling that a mad dog should have been allowed to run at large in the pastures of that section.

The midsummer outing of the Vermont Press association will be held next Thursday and Friday. The rendezvous will be at Barton, and Friday will be spent in an excursion to Willoughby lake. The quill pushers who go there for the first time will be surprised at the entrancing view which is revealed on approaching the lake from the north or south. A Brattleboro man who returned recently from an extended motor car journey through Canada and New England said that of over 20 lakes which he visited none equalled the scenic beauty of Willoughby.—Brattleboro Reformer.

The selection of a place of meeting for the newspapermen of Vermont near Lake Willoughby was a good advertising move for that attractive spot because the editors cannot fail to go away from their meeting without being entranced by the revelation of the wonderful beauties of this little Alpine scenery in an inaccessible section of Vermont, unapproached by railroads and some miles distant from a town of any considerable population. Lake Willoughby is well known to St. Johnsbury, Lyndonville, Barton and Newport people, but to the people of most of the other larger communities of the state it is nothing more than a name. The Brattleboro man who made the "discovery" of the scenic beauties of the combination of lake and mountains is one of the comparatively few people outside the range of the immediately contiguous towns who have been fortunate enough to view the grand panorama; but he is one of a number that is unanimous in speaking highly of the beauties of the place. There surely is no combination, in Vermont, of mountain and water that equals Lake Willoughby. The editors are certain to voice the same expression after their trip to the lake in conjunction with their mid-summer meeting at Barton; and thereafter the resort is likely to get no slight impetus from the good words written for readers in every part of the state.

SUMMER CAMP'S FOR BOYS.

The fortunate unraveling of the mystery of the lost boy on Camel's Hump must have been a relief to his relatives and friends and to those who were deeply stirred by the news of his disappearance during the night, for even on a mountain so near settlements as is Camel's Hump there are possibilities for tragic outcome, especially for those who walk about in the night. There are sheer precipices of great height, at the base of which are rock accumulations; and there are large areas of dense forests in which a person with a tendency to become confused might wander about for some time and run the chances of sustaining fractures or sprains of the lower limbs that would make one well-nigh helpless. But, as it turned out, the Charlotte youngster caused a great hue and cry unnecessarily because of his rather unceremonious leave of the camp where he was stopping with boys of his age under charge of an adult person. The occurrence should not serve to arouse doubt in the minds of parents of the advisability of letting the boys attend these summer camps, because the camps of this sort, whether in the mountains or on the shores of some body of water, are generally conducted by men competent to have oversight, and it is rarely that harm comes to the members of the camp through inattention on the part of the directors. In this case no blame attaches to the person in charge on Camel's Hump; the occurrence was something outside of the usual and little likely to happen, and, as it turned out, no particular harm was done. It is a good thing to let the boys go into camps of this sort for, besides giving them healthful exercise, it teaches them self-reliance to a certain extent and acquaints them with facts that will prove of benefit to them. The Camel's Hump incident should not, therefore, serve to deter parents from allowing their sons to participate in these summer camps.

A YEAR OF THE WAR.

The close of the first year of the European war finds the prospects of peace decidedly remote. Despite the tremendous losses of men and destruction of property, despite 12 months of blood letting, despite the paralyzation or stagnation of the commercial progress of the various countries involved, the governments of few of the nations would desire peace with the war issues so greatly unsettled as they are at the present time. As proof of that lack of desire for the ending of the war, note the greater efforts being made in most of the nations for continuance of the war through another winter, the husbanding of resources, the training of the reserve troops and the pouring of vast war funds into the war chests. The end of the war is not near. Undoubtedly the war will run along for another year, with its terrible slaughter and waste of money.

Were the war to end at the present time or perhaps several months from now, the advantage would be largely with Germany and the domination of Europe and Asia would be the Kaiser's. True enough, Germany has been stripped of her colonial possessions, but Germany retains practically all of Belgium and a foothold in France, while in the eastern arena of war she has not only swept back the Russian hordes for her negligible ally to the southward but she has continued on to the city of Warsaw itself, the third largest in the Russian empire. Although practically surrounded by her enemies, Germany has utilized that seemingly dangerous position to her advantage by moving her armies like a shuttlecock back and forth from one new frontier to the other, while the entente powers are separated and able to strike a blow not at all in unison or in the same place. She has the advantage of compactness, whereas her enemies are scattered and lacking in cohesion of effort to a marked extent. She really is ahead at this time. The entente powers, therefore, do not wish for the close of the war now; it would be fatal to them and their futures. Hence, with their tremendous resources and their command of the sea, the war may be expected to continue.

Difficult Work Selecting Superintendents.

One of the problems confronting the state board of education is selecting superintendents for the many new supervisory units made necessary by the new school law. It is no easy matter to pick up men to fill this responsible position. Too often in the past, superintendents have been men with little or no training or education in rural schools or rural school work. Many of our present superintendents were high school teachers only a few years from college when appointed. It has been a long process to get these men into harmony with, and wise counselors for, our rural school problems.—Barre Monitor.

No. 8---Commercial Deposits

The eighth of a series of advertisements setting forth the relationship of the bank to the community, its scope of business and its justification for existence.

There are, of course, two classes of depositors: those depositing that they may draw checks against their accounts, and those who deposit savings for safe-keeping. We have already considered the latter, so we will now speak of the commercial depositors.

National banks are primarily commercial institutions and as such welcome check accounts. Such accounts offer the best possible medium by which the business house, the corporation, or the individual may make disbursements. The handling of money, with its attendant difficulties, as change-making, is avoided, and a complete record of each transaction is obtained, for the cancelled checks are returned each month.

We should be glad to explain the system to anyone and to show the checks we can furnish without charge. No accounts can be too small to merit our attention.

Deposits may be sent by mail, and will be received for.

Dozen Owners of Buildings Ordered to Provide Fire Escapes.

Chief of Police Connolly was busy today distributing to about a dozen building owners in the city letters from Charles F. Dalton, secretary of the state board of health, notifying the owners of blocks that an examination by the board had revealed the need of fire escapes. The letters are virtually orders to provide the buildings with satisfactory escapes.

Angel Higiera and Rosa Pellon of 239 Barre street were married this morning. The groom is a granite cutter. Both are natives of Santander, Spain. Ramon Toraya and Soladad Gomez were married at 137 Berlin street.

A. Allyn Bishop of Newport, well known throughout New England as a photographer, who has been at the Pavilion for the past two weeks, returned this morning to his home.

Carlisle Hancock of Randolph, who has been making a visit in the city with friends, went to-day to Burlington for a few weeks' stay at the military camp.

Motor visitors at the Pavilion yesterday: Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Buckwell, Mr. and Mrs. George D. Buckwell and Miss Helen Buckwell and J. D. Cox, jr., Cleveland, O.; Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Griswold and Mrs. H. L. Chapman, Yonkers, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. E. Von Roswadowski, New York.

John Avery, legislative reference librarian, left last evening on a bicycle trip through the state, planning to go to Ticonderoga, where Mrs. Avery is passing a few weeks.

F. Bernadini of Ludlow is making a few weeks' visit with his brother, A. Bernadini of 73 Main street.

Deputy Sheriff Henry Lawson, Mrs. Lawson and son, Teddy, and Miss Mary Watson of Barre left this morning for Highgate Springs for a week's stay in camp. Mr. and Mrs. George McGrath and child of East State street also went to Highgate to-day.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Heaton and two children of State street went to-day to Waterbury for the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Brown and son, William, left this morning for their home, Springfield, Mass. They have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Gilman Luce of Cliff street, making the trip by automobile.

A son was born Thursday to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lackey, the infant being the grandson of Deputy U. S. Marshal George P. Lackey.

Frederick Shepard returned yesterday from Groton, where he has been passing several weeks in camp.

Miss Louise Drennan returned last evening to her home in St. Albans, after a brief visit in the city with friends.

Two employees of the New England Telephone Co. attached to the Burlington office arrived in this city last evening, having walked from Burlington, making an inspection of the line along the way. The trip was started Tuesday, repairs being made when necessary.

Levi P. Smith of Burlington was in the city yesterday on legal matters.

The Y. M. C. A. team of the City league, as yet undefeated, will endeavor to mark up their fifth straight victory this afternoon at Inter-city park, when they meet as their opponents the Clerks. The game will start at 3:15 o'clock.

Better Butter Makers.

The state department of agriculture is not making much noise about it but it is busy developing markets for Vermont butter. It has secured markets for butter from several cooperative creameries at an advance of from one to three cents a pound and this increase goes directly into the pockets of the farmers. The agent, Mr. Austin, recently had a chance to contract 11,000 pounds of butter that would secure ninety-four or better per week with one firm in Philadelphia at a very good price. He is unable to secure at present that amount of butter of that grade.

Distinctive packages for their butter is one of the methods urged by the department of agriculture so a farm that particular creamery or farm shall become known to the consumer and is a distinct advantage whenever it is adopted.

This shows the excellent opportunities there are for Vermont butter makers to improve their product and get fair compensation for the pains necessary to improve it. The opportunity for Vermont farmers to increase the production of their butter and get more money for their butter was never greater than at present. All that is required is more brain work and practical common sense methods and the farmers of this state would enjoy a more stable prosperity than any other class.—St. Johnsbury Caledonian.
